CONTENTS

PEDIATRICIAN'S PERSPECTIVE

99 The Pediatrician and the Under Toad
Lawrence F. Nazarian

ARTICLES

101 Do You Know These Patients? High-Risk Pediatric Encounters
Barbara M. Korsch

107 Insurability of the Pediatric Patient With Cardiac Disease
Norman S. Talner

111 Cardiac Transplantation in Children
Ira A. Parness and Alexander S. Nadas

119 General Pediatrician's Role in High-Risk Deliveries
Patricia A. Keener

106 Advances in Pediatrics

ABSTRACTS

100 Deafness

106 Adolescent Pregnancy and Cytomegalovirus

118 Toxic Shock Syndrome: Not Always due to "Staph"

126 Seat Belt Legislation

127 Mastoiditis

Cover: Boy With Baseball, by George Luks (American artist of the Ash Can school—1867-1933). Son of a physician from Williamsport, PA, he studied art in Philadelphia and Europe before settling in New York, where he worked as a newspaper illustrator and cartoonist. Then he pursued a career as a painter. His work, like the other Ash Can artists, depicted life in the raw. Boy With Baseball, done in the early 20th century, is illustrative of his work. This appealing portrait of a street urchin, done in broad brush strokes, with a baseball, symbolizes the all-American game. This is an appropriate motif for PREP 2-year 4, when sports medicine and physical fitness are special topics for review.

The printing and production of Pediatrics in Review is made possible, in part, by an educational grant from Ross Laboratories.